Over 250 years of gardening experience

Royal Botanic Gardens, Kew

Originally laid out in 1759, the Royal Botanic Gardens, Kew has a remarkable heritage and performs a unique role in international plant science and conservation. As a UNESCO World Heritage site, Kew has the largest and most diverse botanical collections under its care. Kew is also an internationally respected centre of scientific excellence.

Based on a second site at Wakehurst, Kew's Millennium Seed Bank is the largest global conservation project in the world and will eventually hold the seeds of at least half of all known plants.
